

JAMELLE R. ROSS

Clinical Operations

Jamelle R Ross is a clinician, speaker, author and educator. She holds over 30 years of expertise in hospital based service areas, industry and corporate environments, focusing on the development, standardization and implementation of regulatory compliant processes, while recognizing the importance of systems and resource utilization in attaining the mission of the organization.

In addition to her clinical practice, her purpose and passion lies in making a difference in the healthcare practices, services and outcomes of developing countries. Jamelle serves on medical missions, having deployment to Cambodia, Guatemala and India. She is known for her dynamic and engaging approach to training and education, as well as her speaking style.

She is a Regional Clinical Operations Director for STERIS/Integrated Medical Systems, International, Incorporated, where she provides clinical management and oversight of On-site Sterile Processing projects for healthcare organizations of all sizes.

She holds affiliations with American Nurses Association (ANA), Florida Nurses Association (FNA), Association of PeriOperative Nurses (AORN) and International Association of Hospital Central Service Materials Management (IAHCSMM).

